AWARENESS PROGRAMME HANDICRAFT ARTISAN

Design intervention has a responsibility; it cannot tamper with the artisan's training and creative vision with the purely aesthetic idea of developing his product for a temporary market. Further, notions that equate handicrafts with backward or primitive societies, and regard machine-made goods as being representative or symbolic of upward mobility and social striving by certain sections, have to be countered with fairly vigorous campaigning.

That the artisans need to be involved in every aspect of market research, design, production, costing and marketing, and also need to understand the adaptations and changes in the form, function, usage and sale of the product that they are making, is a form of intervention that has achieved a virtual consensus. Equally, there is a need for intervening agencies/designers to understand and study the craft(s), the product(s), and the market(s) that they are trying to enter in order to inculcate sensitivity towards the needs of the artisans, and also minimize the space for exploitative middlemen and traders. Many of the latter may have jumped on to the bandwagon of crafts production for short-term gains and quick sales, making the quick production of a cheap product their priority.

GENDER ISSUES IN DISASTER MANAGEMENT

The Indian subcontinent is among the world's most disaster prone areas. Floods, cyclones, droughts, earthquakes, landslides and other hazardous events like tsunami are a recurrent phenomena in our country, causing huge loss of life, property and damage to the environment because of which India is considered as one of the most disaster prone country in the world. Nearly 58% of the landmass is prone to earthquakes of various intensities; over 40 million hectares is prone to floods; about 8% of the total area is prone to cyclones, 68% of the area is susceptible to drought and its hilly areas are at risk from landslides and avalanches (National Disaster Management Guidelines, 2012). These hazards threaten millions of lives and can cause large-scale financial, infrastructure, crop, and productivity losses that seriously set back India's overall development efforts. During the last four to five decades, vulnerability to disasters have been increasing due to rising population, haphazard urbanization, structural development in high risk zones, environmental degradation, climate change etc. The risks and vulnerabilities that people face from natural disasters are as much a product of their social situation as their physical environment. Vulnerabilities and capacities of individuals and social groups evolve over time and determine people's abilities to cope with disaster and recover from it. Social networks, power relationships, knowledge and skills, gender roles, health, wealth, and location all affect risk and vulnerability to disasters and shape the capacity of women and men to respond to them.

We were glad to have Mr Saif as the guest. He is a source of inspiration for everyone at National Ngo." HELPING HOMELESS PERSON, DELHI

It's the time of the year again when thousands of homeless look for shelter from Delhi's unforgiving winter nights. In its 'Winter Action Plan' announced earlier this week, Delhi government set up 183 shelter homes across the city to accommodate 15,774 homeless people.

Though a survey conducted by the government's Delhi Urban Shelter Improvement Board (DUSIB) in 2014 records the number of homeless people in Delhi at 16,000, various NGOs estimate that the number may run up to a lakh people or more.

As winter sets in, DUSIB stares at the annual challenge of providing a safe and comfortable stay for the men, women and children who otherwise largely live on pavements during summer. DUSIB has decided to ensure free stay to the homeless till March 2018, with the facilities for breakfast, warm water and television in all shelters.

GST AWARENESS PROGRAMME WITH MSME

In 2017, the Small Industries Development Bank of India (SIDBI) and Federation of Indian Micro and Small & Medium Enterprises (FISME) ran a national campaign for creating awareness about GST for MSMEs. It was during these early interactions with MSMEs working at the ground level did we realize how most entrepreneurs were keen to know about, what was changing. They were also interested to know about the basic structure of GST regime and how it would be administered. Quite obviously, they looked at it from transactional point of view too: will they be able to do it? What would be cost of compliance? What would be the benefit?

GST is a single tax to be levied on the supply of goods and services. It will be borne by each part of the goods and services supply chain, right from the manufacturer to the consumer.

Taxes paid on the purchase of goods or services (called Input Tax), whether for resale or for producing/ manufacturing a new item, will be utilised as credits to offset the tax to be paid on sale of the said goods. This process will be repeated as many times as the said goods change hands in the original form or in a new form.
